- As time allows, general conversation about the sermon is welcomed.

Discussion Questions

- What habit makes you who you are?
- What habitual actions makes God who he is?
- What habits would you say are the most healthy and helpful for your life? For your faith? Why do you think this is the case?
- In the story from scripture, everyone from leaders down to the lowly had a contribution toward the daily rituals at the temple. The sermon concluded that "Daily participation in your faith counters spiritual alienation." Do you agree with this principle? Why or why not?
- What aspects of your daily life leave you feeling isolated from others or alienated from God? How might you God be inviting you to re-think, reclaim, or redefine those aspects for God's glory and your good?
- What habitual practices are you most tempted to neglect in your life, and why?
- In Nehemiah 10, the wood offering is what is most needed to sustain the fire on the altar for ongoing worship. What is symbolically the "wood" for your own worship. What is the non-negotiable resource that you needs in order to sustain a life-long relationship with God?
